App Info Download APK [0.95](1.93 MB) ALL VERSIONS Ever wanted to make your 2020 lock screen look like it stepped out of 2012? Good ol days when you can see your upcoming calendar appointments, stock prices, and weather without unlocking your phone? You're in luck, because a new app from developer Zachary Wander promises to put all the widgets you want on your lock screen where they belong. How it functions is really rather interesting. The app can appear as a frame on top of your real key screen by using the ability to do so. While it's never a good idea to give you widespread truth like this, the app is open source and neither ADB or root is necessary, which makes it a good way to add enhanced market ability to your key screen without having to go down the hole in technical jargon itself. Widgets can be set to have a transparent background to let key screen elements be shown through, and they can also hide widgets when there is a notification displayed on the lock screen. The lock screen widget only works on Android Lollipop 5.1 and later because the initial output of Lollipop 5.0 does not include the basic framework required to support this hack. The Widgets myself, but if you're in them, this app will let you put any homescreen widget you want into your lock screen, which may be very useful depending on your work flow. Sorry for the inconvenience, but I have no control over this. The issue is set in Android 4.3. Clock hack does NOT interfere with Android system updates, OTA or vice versa. Hack changes settings to your 'user data' only, not to the actual system. Permissions to implement these changes are usually limited, so root is required. If you do not re-root your device after updating to Android 4.3, it's highly RECOMMENDED you undo the hack hours before continuing, or you won't have a way to recover the stock digital hours widget on your device. # UninspireUncheck the app from the 'Device Administrators' list under 'Security' in your 'Settings' app. You can also do this directly from the left swipe of the app in the navigation menu by selecting 'Deactivate'.# Usage1) Run the application2) Make an option and press3) In the 'Activate device administrator' screen, select 'Activate'4) Turn off unwanted features suis togol. To undo or return this, simply rerun 'Clock Hack'. You'll also need to manually remove the clock widget and read the desired for the changes to take effect if your lock screen widget continues. Note that these settings continue even if you turn this app on or off. (Can take some screen lock/unlock to take effect) There are some downsides to using this hack. You will also lose access to the same widget from your home screen. These alternative clocks also won't launch click alarm apps, and also don't display your world clock. On Android 4.3, to restore the bold hours widget, you may need to read the widget manually by first removing the brave hourly widget. # Caveats when disabling widgets on Android 4.2Enabling this will force a lockup to use the 'default fallback widget'. At Google build, the default is the deskClock share digital hour widget (with a bold hour style). This behavior cannot be changed. The bold clock only affects the official Google build, and is part of Google's proprietary firmware.
